

The Social-conflict Approach always happens in the race struggles, competition for educational resources, and among the nobles and the poor, which show the conflict or the contradiction in this society. Nowadays, people may qualify because of the family's status in society, and some capable people may not be hired because of their low level. In contrast, incompetent people may be reused because of wealthy or influential families.

The status of education can be an example to shows that influential people, or rich people they can send their children to aristocratic schools or private schools for in-depth study. According to research, "There is a strong correlation between income inequality and educational inequality in Hong Kong" (O'Sullivan & Tsang, 2015, p. 13). Hong Kong society has a big problem in education this field, the rich people go to top school which causes unfair educational behavior. Also, education in mainland China is also a problem. The level of rural education and urban education is seriously inconsistent. In high school, I was fortunate enough to teach in the countryside one time, which experienced that the place I went to is a poor countryside in Liangshan. They lack daily necessities and even lack living security. Because of the difference in level, many primary older children in considerable education may not be able to write. At that time, I instantly felt the education brought about by social conflicts in different regions, different genders, and different classes system and stages of unfairness. Rural education simply cannot match urban education, let alone the elite education of the rich and aristocrats. After all, they may not even be satisfied with their lives sometimes if there is no government and social funding.

APSS1A08 Assignment 1 ---Question 1

--- Jiang Guanlin (21093962D)

Also, social conflict shows in life. The UK society can be a good example. Nowadays, UK is still an elite class with aristocracy, some reach people like the nobility members, and the royal family held a lot of land and wealth. But some lower-level class people, their home just like a tiny “Ant nest”. According to the videos, which is a show play by Channel 5, RICH HOUSE, POOR HOUSE (Claire, 2017). This show shows that the difference between the rich people’s home and poor people’s home, and also shows them the style of their spending, also shows the big difference between different classes by comparing.

In this society, the social-conflict approach also can be used in the male and female questions, which shows that the gender problem has become a bad issue in our life. The example happened in my life, one day, in middle school, a group homework was given to us, but my group did not finish the assignment before the deadline, so we needed to do some exercise punishment, the boys in our group needed to do push-ups, girls to do squat. I do not know why girls and boys do different punishments; the different gender problems are more prevalent in this kind of situation. Also, in some cases, males always need to do some physical work because of the traditional fixed thinking. Because of this long-term problem, a social-conflict approach has gradually formed.

APSS1A08 Assignment 1 ---Question 1
--- Jiang Guanlin (21093962D)

Reference:

Claire, C.-J. (2017, March 30). Rich house, poor house. RICH HOUSE, POOR HOUSE. Retrieved September 30, 2021, from <https://www.channel5.com/show/rich-house-poor-house/>

O'Sullivan, M., & Tsang, M. Y.-H. (2015). Educational inequalities in higher education in Hong Kong. Inter-Asia Cultural Studies, 16(3), 12. <https://doi.org/10.1080/14649373.2015.1069007>